he used to be concerned with such philosophic thoughts very seriously. he used to leap on the roof of his house in the well shaped figure in his dreams. then he used to go unwillingly along the edge of roof like edge of a pond. again he wished to go away from the edge towards the centre but the well shaped figure's gravity pulled him towards it and he fell down. suddenly he used to wake up and then he was surrounded by such good and bad thoughts. he used to be happy that it was not a reality but at the same time he used to be worried supposing the repetition of the nightmares. aaruni started researching about the circumstances when he was having such nightmares. he used to think that he was awake till 9 p.m. he was also awake till 10 p.m. so when did he go to sleep but he alleviated his worries by considering the fact that if he could know when he slept he couldn't sleep at all. his mind is changed many times. he also read many psychological books for that. then his education started. he wrote ganapati's ankush and then reciting the sacred lined dedicated to the goddess parvati and the god shiva.

aaruni used to laugh after completing that mantra. his pronunciation problem was also solved. while learning numbers he used to utter in same rhythm but jumping from ten to nineteen and then from twenty to twenty nine. nand's younger son aaruni was according to his expectations from the very beginning. there was some reason behind that. nand was teaching him writing one to hundred. first he taught him one to ten and then started eleven he thought that it could be too much pressure for that little boy. but that boy learnt eleven to twenty and twenty one to thirty as he felt that it was of the same trend as one to ten. when he discussed that with his father his father challenged him to write up to one hundred. when that boy showed him that correctly then they discussed how to write numbers in words. nand gave special attention to these four numbers gyarah (eleven), ekkis (twenty-one), unasi (seventy-nine) and navasi (eighty-
